Pachanga Belén Mena.2007 Whilst her friends go to Pachangas (= parties), Ecuadorian designer Belén Mena prefers to spend time on her new moon nights in the rainforest. She spends lonely nights observing moths on the ruta verde. These insects, which seem invisible at first and are often subject to prejudice and the dangers of fly swats, are those that flutter around street lanterns at dawn. She carefully plucks the sleeping moths at dawn from their leaves and places them on contrasting backgrounds, she then photographs them. She passionately collects these portraits and distils them into patterns created by nature...European butterfly researchers discovered moths they had never seen before amongst Belén's photos. Designers on the other hand see the creative potential of the patterns that abstract the wings and bodies of these creatures.--
