The Politics of Ethnic Pressure Judith S Goldstein.2020-10-29 Originally published in 1990, The Politics of Ethnic Pressure examines and evaluates the lobbying activities of the American Jewish Committee (AJC) between 1906 and 1917. The AJC worked to confront two specific problems: the outbreak of a series of programs against the Jews in Russia, and the campaign of the restrictionists in the United States who sought to impede the entry of the new immigrants from eastern and southern Europe. This book focuses on the lobbying activities of the AJC with respect to these issues, and puts forward key questions as to why they cared about the Russian problem, how they viewed their place within American society, and how they lobbied on behalf of their Jewish interests.

The Process Chontelle Wilson.2020-06-26 "The Process" is a short story book that I initially started writing in 2015. I got the idea to write a story based on some of my life's experiences. It was in 2019 that I revisited the idea and reopened this chapter of my life. I decided to share some of my experiences and opinions based on my life's journey, both personally and spiritually. Openly sharing personal information can be challenging at times, but it can also be liberating for self and for others. I most definitely had to seek God on what to share and how to write everything down on paper so that it can be an eye opener for others to read and healing for some to receive. Sometimes we must endure hardships, test, trials, and tribulations in life for us to grow, develop, and mature into the woman or man in which God has created and called us to be. I pray that this short story will prick your heart and transform your mind. In JESUS name Amen

The Challenge of Crime in a Free Society United States. President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice.1967 This report of the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice -- established by President Lyndon Johnson on July 23, 1965 -- addresses the causes of crime and delinquency and recommends how to prevent crime and delinquency and improve law enforcement and the administration of criminal justice. In developing its findings and recommendations, the Commission held three national conferences, conducted five national surveys, held hundreds of meetings, and interviewed tens of thousands of individuals. Separate chapters of this report discuss crime in America, juvenile delinquency, the police, the courts, corrections, organized crime, narcotics and drug abuse, drunkenness offenses, gun control, science and technology, and research as an instrument for reform. Significant data were generated by the Commission's National Survey of Criminal Victims, the first of its kind conducted on such a scope. The survey found that not only do Americans experience far more crime than they report to the police, but they talk about crime and the reports of crime engender such fear among citizens that the basic quality of life of many Americans has eroded. The core conclusion of the Commission, however, is that a significant reduction in crime can be achieved if the Commission's recommendations (some 200) are implemented. The recommendations call for a cooperative attack on crime by the Federal Government, the States, the counties, the cities, civic organizations, religious institutions, business groups, and individual citizens. They propose basic changes in the operations of police, schools, prosecutors, employment agencies, defenders, social workers, prisons, housing authorities, and probation and parole officers.
