Die Frau in Weiß: Krimi-Klassiker Wilkie Collins.2017-09-15 The Golden Bough is a wide-ranging, comparative study of mythology and religion, written by the Scottish anthropologist Sir James George Frazer. The book documents and details the similarities among magical and religious beliefs around the globe. Frazer attempted to define the shared elements of religious belief and scientific thought, discussing fertility rites, human sacrifice, the dying god, the scapegoat, and many other symbols and practices whose influences had extended into 20th-century culture. His thesis is that old religions were fertility cults that revolved around the worship and periodic sacrifice of a sacred king. Frazer proposed that mankind progresses from magic through religious belief to scientific thought. The influence of The Golden Bough on contemporary European literature and thought is substantial.

The Man Who Knew Too Much G K Chesterton.2020-04-04 Horne Fisher is the man who 'knows too much...and all the wrong things'. He and his trusty companion Harold March take on the world of crime among societies most eminent members in eight classic mysteries. Fisher has a brilliant mind and powers of deduction - but he always faces a moral dilemma.

The Man Who Knew Too Much (Classic Reprint) Gilbert K. Chesterton.2017-02-16 Excerpt from The Man Who Knew Too Much Abruptly, in the middle of those sunny and windy flats, he came upon a sort of cleft almost narrow enough to be called a crack in the land. It was just large enough to be the water-course for a small stream which vanished at intervals under green tunnels of undergrowth, as if in a dwarfish forest. 5 Indeed, he had an odd feeling as if he were a giant looking over the valley of the pygmies.' When he dropped into the hollow, however, the impression was lost; the 'rocky banks, though hardly above the height of a cot tage, hung over and had the profile of a precipice. As he began to wander down the course of the stream, in idle but romantic curiosity, and saw the water shining in short strips between the great gray boulders and bushes as soft as great green mosses, he fell into quite an opposite vein of fantasy. It was rather as if the earth had opened and swallowed him into a sort of under world of dreams. And when he became con scious of a human figure dark against the silver stream, sitting on a large boulder and looking rather like a large bird, it was perhaps with some of the premonitions proper to a man who meets the strangest friendship of his life. The Man Who Knew Too Much Gilbert Keith Chesterton.2019-11-14 A prolific and popular writer, G. K. Chesterton (1874-1936) is best known as the creator of detective-priest Father Brown (even though Chesterton's mystery stories constitute only a small fraction of his writings). The eight adventures in this classic British mystery trace the activities of Horne Fisher, the man who knew too much, and his trusted friend Harold March. Although Horne's keen mind and powerful deductive gifts make him a natural sleuth, his inquiries have a way of developing moral complications. Notable for their wit and sense of wonder, these tales offer an evocative portrait of upper-crust society in pre-World War I England. Gilbert Keith Chesterton (1874-1936) was born in London, educated at St. Paul's, and went to art school at University College London. In 1900, he was asked to contribute a few magazine articles on art criticism, and went on to become one of the most prolific writers of all time. He wrote a hundred books, contributions to 200 more, hundreds of poems, including the epic Ballad of the White Horse, five plays, five novels, and some two hundred short stories, including a popular series featuring the priest-detective, Father Brown. In spite of his literary accomplishments, he considered himself primarily a journalist. He wrote over 4000 newspaper essays, including 30 years worth of weekly columns for the Illustrated London News, and 13 years of weekly columns for the Daily News. He also edited his own newspaper, G.K.'s Weekly. Chesterton was equally at ease with literary and social criticism, history, politics, economics, philosophy, and theology.

Der Mann, der zu viel wusste Gilbert K. Chesterton. 2019-06-01 Horne Fisher ist das selbstbezeichnete »Schwarze Schaf« einer englischen Aristokratenfamilie. Er ist der Mann, der zu viel weiß; er kennt wie kein Zweiter die Motive und Abgründe der »oberen Zehntausend« und die moralische Anfälligkeit der Politiker. Im Unterschied zu seinem berühmten Kollegen, dem freundlichen und rechtschaffenen Pater Brown, ist er ein kühler Kopf und Zyniker. Mit bitterer, britischer Ironie begleiten wir Mr Fischer bei der Aufklärung der Mordfälle, Erpressungen und politischen Ränkespiele, die vorgeblich zum Schutze Englands und der Krone begangen werden, aber nur meist niederen Beweggründen entspringen. Der Band enthält 8 Kurzgeschichten: - Das Gesicht in der Schießscheibe (The Face in the Target) - Der verschwundene Prinz (The Vanishing Prince) - Die Seele eines Schulknaben (The Soul of the Schoolboy) - Der bodenlose Brunnen (The Bottomless Well) - Das Loch in der Mauer (The Hole in the Wall) - Die Liebhaberei eines Anglers (The Fad of the Fisherman) - Der Narr der Familie (The Temple of Silence) - Die Rache der Statue (The Vengeance of the Statue) »Ja, wissen Sie denn nicht«, bemerkte er ruhig, »dass ich der Narr der Familie bin?« »Muss eine kluge Familie sein«, sagte Harold March lächelnd. »Sehr hübsch gesagt«, erwiderte Fisher. »Das ist der Vorteil einer literarischen Laufbahn. Na, vielleicht ist es übertrieben, zu sagen, dass ich der Narr der Familie bin. Es genügt vielleicht zu sagen, dass ich der Schandfleck der Familie bin.« »Mir erscheint es merkwürdig, dass gerade Sie Ihrer Familie Schande bereiten sollten«, bemerkte der Journalist. »Worin haben Sie denn, wie man bei Prüfungen zu sagen pflegte, Ihren Lehrern Schande gemacht?« Null Papier Verlag www.null-papier.de

He has been referred to as the prince of paradox. Time magazine has observed of his writing style: Whenever possible Chesterton made his points with popular sayings, proverbs, allegories-first carefully turning them inside out. Chesterton created the fictional priest-detective Father Brown, and wrote on apologetics. Even some of those who disagree with him have recognised the wide appeal of such works as Orthodoxy and The Everlasting Man. Chesterton routinely referred to himself as an orthodox Christian, and came to identify this position more and more with Catholicism, eventually converting to Catholicism from High Church Anglicanism. George Bernard Shaw, his friendly enemy, said of him, He was a man of colossal genius. Biographers have identified him as a successor to such Victorian authors as Matthew Arnold, Thomas Carlyle, Cardinal John Henry Newman, and John Ruskin. Early life Chesterton was born in Campden Hill in Kensington, London, the son of Marie Louise, née Grosjean, and Edward Chesterton. He was baptised at the age of one month into the Church of England, [10] though his family themselves were irregularly practising Unitarians. According to his autobiography, as a young man he became fascinated with the occult and, along with his brother Cecil, experimented with Ouija boards. Chesterton was educated at St Paul's School, then attended the Slade School of Art to become an illustrator. The Slade is a department of University College London, where Chesterton also took classes in literature, but did not complete a degree in either subject.

The protagonist of these stories is the man of the title, Horne Fisher, an upper-class detective whose investigative gifts often put him in uncomfortable situations where he has to take difficult decisions. In stories like The Face in the Target and The Vengeance of the Statue, which are all told by a third-person narrator, Fisher uses his deductive faculties and theatrical representations to absolve the innocent and incriminate the guilty. Most of the crimes dealt with in these stories are about mysterious murders. Yet, Fisher has also to solve other cases related to theft as well as to disputes over money and estates. Due to his friendly or family relationships with influential statesmen, Fisher often finds himself with too much knowledge about the way things are run in the country. This paradoxically valuable and embarrassing knowledge forces him many a time to let the murderer get away with his crime in order to avoid something more dangerous to happen to the country such as war or rebellion.

The Man Who Knew Too Much G. K. Chesterton. 2017-06-27 Horne Fisher is a skilled detective who always finds his man, but every solution comes with a catch: Exposing the crime will make things worse. Fisher's greatest strength isn't his Holmesian ability to deduce, but his knowledge of the dirty secrets of the ruling class, how the rich and powerful manipulate the government and bend the law to their wills. In this collection, Fisher uses his special skill to get to the bottom of mysteries as diverse as the disappearance of a valuable coin, the framing of an Irish prince, and the death of his own uncle from a falling statue. The Man Who Knew Too Much is a shining example of author G. K. Chesterton's prodigious wit and prescient observation.

The Man Who Knew Too Much G K Chesterton.2021-02-06 This tale begins among a tangle of tales round a name that is at once recent and legendary. The name is that of Michael O'Neill, popularly called Prince Michael, partly because he claimed descent from ancient Fenian princes, and partly because he was credited with a plan to make himself prince-president of Ireland, as the last Napoleon did of France. He was undoubtedly a gentleman of honorable pedigree and of many accomplishments, but two of his accomplishments emerged from all the rest. He had a talent for appearing when he was not wanted and a talent for disappearing when he was wanted, especially when he was wanted by the police. It may be added that his disappearances were more dangerous than his appearances. In the latter he seldom went beyond the sensational-pasting up seditious placards, tearing down official placards, making flamboyant speeches, or unfurling forbidden flags. But in order to effect the former he would sometimes fight for his freedom with startling energy, from which men were sometimes lucky to escape with a broken head instead of a broken neck. His most famous feats of escape, however, were due to dexterity and not to violence. On a cloudless summer morning he had come down a country road white with dust, and, pausing outside a farmhouse, had told the farmer's daughter, with elegant indifference, that the local police were in pursuit of him. The girl's name was Bridget Royce, a somber and even sullen type of beauty, and she looked at him darkly, as if in doubt, and said, Do you want me to hide you? Upon which he only laughed, leaped lightly over the stone wall, and strode toward the farm, merely throwing over his shoulder the remark, Thank you, I have generally been quite capable of hiding myself. In which proceeding he acted with a tragic ignorance of the nature of women; and there fell on his path in that sunshine a shadow of doom.
