Blake's Unlock Your Child Natural Maths Ann Baker,Johnny Baker.2017-04-30 This book is the key parents need to unlock their children's natural maths ability! Children's interest will be engaged as they have fun together with their parent or carer, establishing a solid number sense through useful strategies and games. They will discover and learn effective mental computation strategies as they assist their child to confidently embrace their natural maths ability. The strategies in this book are presented in the same order that children encounter them in school, from Year 1 to Year 4. They each include a colourful illustration and a brief description, followed by games to play with the children to demonstrate how the strategy works. Each different strategy should be introduced in the same order as the book, which follows a carefully constructed developmental sequence.

Maths in the Mind Ann Baker.1991 Maths in the Mind suggests starting points for encouraging children to become fluent and independent thinkers in math lessons. It presents ideas for building on strategies that children acquire naturally before they come to school, and outlines a rich variety of strategies that research has found children develop as they become more competent at mathematics. The activities presented in this book encourage children to use and develop these strategies as part of their mathematical thinking across the full range of the primary school. The activities have been extensively trialled in the classroom as the photographs which accompany the text demonstrate. Maths in the Mind emphasizes the processes involved in mathematical thinking rather than the right answer. Children are encouraged to explore, to delve into what they do know, and this reduces the sense of helplessness that can occur when they don't know what to do. Maths in the Mind complements Mathematics in Process, also written by Ann and Johnny Baker.

View and Do Maths Problem Solving Ann Baker,Johnny Baker.2011 Today's students live in a media-rich world where information is presented visually and electronically. Why not harness student's responsiveness to video-based media as a way of introducing and engaging them in mathematical investigations and problems? Students watch the video to find out the problem and then work out their own strategies to find the solution. They then compare their strategies with those presented by the two characters. A challenge problem (or further complication) is also presented at the end of each scenario for students to solve. The three levels of books and accompanying DVDs in this series feature the same scenarios and characters but with increasingly complex problems to solve.--Back cover.

Mathematics in Process Ann Baker,Johnny Baker.1990 This book extends the confidence that teachers now feel in the language arts to the mathematics lesson. The purposes and conditions of natural learning, now common in the language classroom, are applied to learning and doing mathematics. The emphasis is on encouraging children to try for themselves, letting them develop and compare maths strategies in situations that are meaningful and important. This involves enabling children to develop their own approaches, work collaboratively on mathematics, communicate their findings and reflect on what they have learnt.
