Role of Building Bylaws and Regulations in Shaping Urban Forms Anju Shrestha Joshi.2017-01-27

Abstract: ABSTRACT Building bylaws and regulations are one of the major factors which play a vital role in shaping urban form and built environment. People have become more aware of the urban forms and their impact the built environment. Practices have already been started in most of the cities where codes are developed which will help to control the haphazard urban growth and create a better urban form and the built environment. But in the case of Kathmandu city, the building bylaws and regulations limited with floor area ratio (FAR), ground coverage, setbacks, height of the building and right of way (ROW), which only controls the physical components of the building. In addition, all the laws and codes are specified for the individual building only. Nothing has been formulated to address the various issues of urban design such as the relationship between the buildings, urban form, public realm, streetscapes, public open spaces etc. There is no urban design vision in any sector of the development. Scale, density, urban aesthetics, spaces between buildings, massing, layout, landscape, are not taken into consideration in the bylaws. It is also found that when the bylaws and regulations were introduced, it was done haphazardly without consultation with other departments such as department of roads, housing, water supply etc. which are all related with each other. This has resulted in the present scenario of the urban development of Kathmandu city which seems to be very haphazard and uncontrolled. So there are many issues and questions aroused regarding the current building bylaws and regulations, that they should be revised and re-formulated by introducing urban design guidelines in order to have a better image of the city. So the study makes an attempt to analyze the deficiency of the current bylaws and their impact in the urban form, and then alternatively getting a conclusion that there is a need of alternative approaches to control the haphazard urban growth of the city. iii DOI: 10.5353/th_b3955836 Subjects: City planning - Designs and plans City planning - Nepal - Kathmandu - Case studies Building laws Ordinances, Municipal

Designing Better Architecture Education Manjari Chakraborty.2015-11-11 Designing Better Architecture Education is an outcome of a research conducted systematically with diligence, passion, wide and in-depth exercise on the obvious and latent aspects of undergraduate architecture education. Although specific to India, this study probes the diverse global scenario in acknowledgement of the global style of architecture, where green preferences surface as compulsion. The findings are arranged systematically, analyzed impartially and inferred upon logically. The final bunch of suggestions aimed at a much desirable architecture education revamp in India is, in fact, relevant for architecture education as a whole anywhere. The author suggests compaction of graduation time, intensification of exposures, interactions and instructions, shift of focus, introduction of contemporary specializations, restructuring intake, revamping academic administration and a significant change of stance in teaching itself, including methods, philosophy, attitude and paraphernalia. The book provides valuable information, insight and suggestions to rejuvenate the academic approach to the education of architecture and forms a reliable basis for further endeavour in this direction.

The Bungalow in Twentieth-Century India Madhavi Desai,Miki Desai.2016-12-05 The primary era of this study - the twentieth century - symbolizes the peak of the colonial rule and its total decline, as well as the rise of the new nation state of India. The processes that have been labeled 'westernization' and 'modernization' radically changed middle-class Indian life during the century. This book describes and explains the various technological, political and social developments that shaped one building type - the bungalow - contemporaneous to the development of modern Indian history during the period of British rule and its subsequent aftermath. Drawing on their own physical and photographic documentation, and building on previous work by Anthony King and the Desais, the authors show the evolution of the bungalow's architecture from a one storey building with a verandah to the assortment of house-forms and their regional variants that are derived from the bungalow. Moreover, the study correlates changes in society with architectural consequences in the plans and aesthetics of the bungalow. It also examines more generally what it meant to be modern in Indian society as the twentieth century evolved.
