The Hero and the Unemployment: Be a hero and defeat unemployment Eng.Sara Ahmad. Finally, here comes the moment everyone wishes for: the moment of graduation through which you reap the fruits of your labor over four years—and perhaps more—of study and effort. It is time to start your career. However, this does not mean you will find the right job after graduation, and you might live through the hardest moments in finding the right job. This may take a long time, from one to six months to a year and even more. Sadness and frustration may creep into you, and when anyone asks you about your condition, you answer with despair and grieve that you are unemployed. But hold on a moment! Why do you look at this period with all this pessimism? Do you not know that this period cannot be compensated for or repeated in your life? Why not change your outlook on it and treat it as a self discovery period? Yes, it is the appropriate period in which you can return to think again and inspect your talents, your life, and everything that is important and exciting. This humble book will tell you the story of Sultan, a young graduate student caught in the confusion between registering for a Master's degree and looking for a job. He decided to consult someone, but he does not know who to consult. You will feel his feelings, go along on his journey, and see him struggle to find a solution to his situation. You will learn how he discovers the most important secrets and see how he begins to step forward in order to overcome the stage of confusion he has experienced. Which steps will he choose? What is his final decision? And where will he go? Here is where we will dig in now... I wish you enjoyable reading.
