Nutrition in Pregnancy and Childbirth Lorna Davies, Ruth Deery. 2013-12-04 Making good nutritional choices can mean women optimise the outcomes of their birthing experience and offer their babies the best possible start in life. To support this, all health professionals who work with women during pregnancy, birth and the postnatal period need to have an appropriate knowledge of nutrition, healthy eating and other food related issues. This evidence-based text provides an informative and accessible introduction to nutrition in pregnancy and childbirth. As well as allowing readers to recognise when nutritional deficiency may be creating challenges, it explores the psychosocial and cultural context of food and considers their relevance for women's eating behaviour. Finally, important emerging issues, such as eating during labour, food supplements and maternal obesity, are discussed. An important reference for health professionals working in midwifery or public health contexts especially, this book is also the ideal companion for a course on nutrition in pregnancy and childbirth.

Visual Writing Alex Baratta. 2010-07-12 Considering the fact that the academic essay continues to be widely used as an assessment tool within education, there is a need for students to develop their skills in this area. However, it is often the case that students perceive instruction in academic writing, if it is offered at all, as boring. This book addresses these two issues. First, the book can be used by students themselves, even in the absence of academic writing classes, as a self-help guide, from which they can develop their knowledge of academic writing and subsequent proficiency. Second, by discussing the components of academic writing in terms—such as film—which are familiar to today's generation, students are enabled to relate to the material better and see what might have been perceived as dull from a brand new perspective. Visual learners in particular will enjoy the analogous link between films and essays, and students today are arguably more visually literate than previous generations, being exposed to visuals on a daily basis through text message iconography, computer games and the Internet. The visual instruction provided in turn helps to facilitate mental visuals in students' minds, from which their knowledge of essay writing can start to develop.

Eat the Meat, We Have the Potatoes at Home Laird W. Beaver.2018-10-30 This is personal journey to various places in the world where the author recounts several of his most memorable meals. The author also challenges the reader to recall 10 of their own most memorable meals, which is very likely not as easy as it may sound.The author's experiences are the result of having lived in 6 different countries and traveling in or working in 57 countries so far. He also poses the question : Do we Eat to live or Live to Eat? and explores this topic with examples of his own discoveries of 'Interesting' food. There is an amusing section on Studying the Menu. Why does it take some folks so long to make choice?A selection of web-based articles is provided that provide some additional background on a wide variety of dining experiences. Also included is an interesting set of pictures of not only the food but the locations and environment. There are also some maps for guidance.It is humorous, entertaining and thought provoking by challenging the reader to think a bit more of why we eat what we do eat and why we don't eat other food items - learned behavior? or acquired tastes? Or biological?There are frequent references to the lack of food choices available during the 1940's and 1950's in small town Minnesota; the food stores simply did not have a wide assortment of food and certainly nothing foreign or exotic. Today there is such a wide variety of foods available from all over the world the super markets are overflowing with product. In some ways this now complicates the decision process but expands the foods that we do eat and enjoy.
