Women in the Third World Lynne Brydon.1989 Women in the Third World provides an up-to-date general account and review of research on the roles and status of women in contemporary Third World societies. The book focuses on four major themes of underdevelopment which have particular relevance for gender roles and relations: the household, production, reproduction and policy. These issues are illustrated with material from rural and urban areas in all parts of the Third World. The book summarizes significant ideas and findings. Lynne Brydon and Sylvia Chang have avoided a narrow focus on particular regions and countries to provide a synoptic overview. In addition to being a valuable source of reference for scholars interested in gender and development in the Third World, the book also attempts to pinpoint fundamental aspects of gender inequality which apply to women everywhere. The overriding conclusion of the book is that women's experiences of development are generally negative and that intervention is urgently required to prevent their positions relative to men's deteriorating still further.

Women Farmers and Rural Change in Asia Noeleen Heyzer.1987 The case studies provide examples of the range and diversity of rural development taking place in several Asian countries and their impact on women. Rural Asian Women Robert Orr Whyte, Pauline Whyte. 2018-06-11 Within the overall scope of a long term study being conducted at the Institute on rural development, an advance summary is provided of the salient factors governing women's lives in the family and their role in production in monsoonal and equatorial Asia. Reasons are suggested for major differences in the status of women in Southeast Asia as compared with those of South and East Asia. Cultural factors influencing female education, size of family, activities in production and earning ability are discussed. Actions necessary to meet the most pressing current and future needs of rural women are indicated.

Understanding gender dynamics in the context of rural transformation processes Colfer, C.J.P., Ihalainen, M., Monterroso, I. 2020-12-02 This study set out to illustrate and understand how the ongoing processes of rural transformation are influencing women's and men's labor, and broader gender relations among the Kenyah. It examines the changes that have occurred in two Uma' Jalan Kenyah villages in East Kalimantan - based on previous longterm ethnographic research (beginning in 1979 and continuing periodically until 2004), ending with a Rapid Rural Appraisal visit in 2019. Various development efforts have altered these peoples' environment, from dense tropical rainforest in the 1970s, through extensive forest loss due successively to logging, industrial timber plantations and transmigration. Most recently oil palm plantations have flourished over much of the province (including the two study communities), prompting radical changes to people's agricultural practices. Here, we examine the implications of these changes for men's and women's lives, roles and interactions. The most surprising finding is the continuation of comparatively equitable gender dynamics among the Kenyah. This is in the face of narratives and policies - from education, government, business and religion - with seriously marginalizing gender implications, to which the people are increasingly exposed.

Empowering The Rural Women Surya Rathore, Manmeet Kaur. 2023-03-15 To address the goal 5 (Gender Equality) of Sustainable Development, it is deemed vital that we first understand the gender inequalities and the contribution of the second gender, i.e. women. We need to bring women into the mainstream to bring both genders at par. Since most of our population lives in villages, we need to have an in-depth knowledge of rural women's role in the development and understand the means and ways to empower them holistically, be it in terms of education, social, technological, political, legal etc. Today's environment calls for a need for women in rural areas to go in for bringing the various drudgery-reducing technologies into practice as well as empower themselves economically through Self Help Groups (SHGs). Rural women must understand the coping strategies associated with climate change which is again a challenge, and the use of Information and Communication Technologies (ICTs) to be more informed and empowered citizens for the welfare of their families, communities, societies and the nation at large. To attain the national goal of doubling the farmers' income by 2022, rural women's economic contribution must be increased through entrepreneurship. To make this dream come true, rural women need to be educated, malnutrition in rural areas; especially among women, needs to be removed, they will have to be technologically empowered, and rural women need to break the shackles of traditional hiccups and be aware of the latest information related to government programmes and schemes along with legal literacy concerning them to be able to understand the various provisions made available by the government for them and to enable them to enforce the same. This book encapsulated all the required dimensions of rural women empowerment: education, health & nutrition, technological empowerment, political empowerment instruments like the Panchayati Raj system, economic empowerment through entrepreneurship, etc. It covers the health challenges of women labourers, hill women, drudgery issues of brick layering women, women and Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR), and constraints to women's empowerment. A few case studies and success stories of women entrepreneurs find their place in this book. The book also provides solutions to the issues of rural women, such as knowledge about those government schemes and programmes that empower women and provides women strength with the golden rays of constitutional mandates to make them sabla from abla. In a nutshell, this book provides conceptual clarity regarding the concept of women empowerment, the different dimensions of empowerment, issues and strategies to cope with the same in one place.

Gender and rural development Olanike F. Deji.2011

Socio-economic Position of East African Rural Women Suraiya Tabassum Rehman.2004 Extrait de la couverture : Women all over the world raise families often single handedly. They care for children, the sick, the elderly and often adult, able-bodied men as well. In some countries they work more than fifteen-sixteen hours a day tilling the fields, fetching water, carrying firewood and cooking because their prime responsibility is of 'home makers'. When it is stated that in East Africa the home is the responsibility of women, the statement is not to be interpreted lightly. It does not simply refer to the cleaning, cooking and childcare, but also to the production and preparation of all that goes into making her home. It is well established that east african rural women have had a strong, historic and continuing role in food production, processing and marketing. They have the highest female participation rate in agriculture of all regions of the world. Even then they are not considered as significant contributors to east african economy and their back breaking contribution falls outside the scope of official statistical statistics resulting in their exclusion from legal power, i.e., ownership of land and facilities such as credit or technological advancement training. The present book tries to have a look into the lives of these neglected contributors with the hope that the policy makers would take women's concern into their plans and programmes.
